Our vision is a world where people’s bodies are not victimized, exploited, bought or sold for the sexual gratification of another person.

Our mission is to stand with and support women with experience in the commercial sex trade, and its associated exploitation, trafficking and prostitution, by providing a range of community-based services.
Dear RIA Community,

Ready. Inspire. Act is an organization purposed to serve and support women in the aftermath of being bought and sold for the sexual gratification and power gain of another person. At the core of our work is building trust with and between each other as a staff team, as a Board of Directors, as donors and funders, which we extend to the women we walk with every day. As a team, we have demonstrated...

Readiness to dig deep and reflect, to speak up and out for what is right and good and just. Inspiration that we find in one another that supports the next woman we are privileged to meet. Action to stand up and with each other so that we grow and heal as a people through the strength of our different stories and pathways forward. 2019 was a year of building deeper relationships with one another and the women we support every day. We trust the women we walk with to know what it is they need support around. We trust the women we meet, as the experts in their life stories. We trust that you the RIA community will continue to show up every day with us which makes the work possible.

Thank you, all of you, for being part of making 2019 simply awesome!

We are a team of survivors, advocates, clinicians, and dynamic leaders who are committed to standing alongside women with lived experience in the sex trade as they grow and heal. We offer a range of services including emotional and safety support, information and referrals, personal advocacy, peer mentorship, clinical therapy, and case management. RIA also provides peer support groups and access to a caring and informed community.

I see the message on my phone, listen to the voicemail, and jot down the return number to call back a woman interested in services. I call, preparing for the 20 minute interaction that will soon connect her with a mentor, a listening ear, and hopefully the resources she is looking for.

She’s heard about RIA House from a friend. She heard we did groups in the prison, she heard that we have people on staff who get it, who’ve been there. “There’s something about having someone to talk to, who knows where you’ve been, that’s just, different…”, she says, and pauses. I nod my head with conviction though I know she can’t see me. I find myself agreeing, affirming her need for connection and understanding that only lived experience offers in this unique way.

I listen to her hopes and goals for herself right now. I can’t stop myself from saying, “that’s so awesome”, when she starts talking about staying clean, getting her kids back, getting her own place, applying for college. There’s not enough space for all the hopes in this two line intake form. Life’s goals cannot be so contained.

I say, “It’s ok if you don’t have an emergency contact”. I read through a list of community based supports to gain insight into how we can connect her with pro bono legal support, job readiness courses, housing vouchers, medical care. I hope she knows that we will try our hardest to help her succeed.

We talk briefly about how safe she feels in the community from traffickers, pimps, customers, partners. Does she feel in danger? She’s not sure if he’s still locked up, but she’s no longer afraid. I think about all that goes unsaid between these short intake answers.

“Who in your life would you consider a source of support?” I ask. “My sponsor, my mom, my kids. I do it all for my kids”, she says. “I wouldn’t have come this far without my sponsor” she reflects.

We’re almost finished with this initial step into RIA House. “Final question”, I say. “What do you like to do? What interests do you have?” She pauses, quiet for a moment. “Well, I guess I’m just starting to figure that out again. I spent so long, not really knowing anything about myself...Now I’ve got to learn it all over again. But, I like to listen to music, I like to be outside, going on walks and working on my recovery. I like to cook for people who like to eat.”

Our call closes, and her next step will lead her to one of our peer mentors—a team of women whose collective experiences offer permission, and care, and open arms for each of the participants to be real with where their own story has brought them. This is only the beginning, and only she knows where the path can lead.

Stepping Into RIA
Reported at Intake, We Asked 39 Women

What is your current housing situation?
- 30-40: 51%
- 20-30: 13%
- 40-50: 10%
- 60-70: 5%
- Not reported: 3%

Almost 80% of our intakes come to us while in a sober living/transitional house.

On a scale of 1-4 how much stress do you experience around providing for your basic needs like food/clothing/housing/etc?
- 1 No Stress: 3%
- 2-4 Mild: 13%
- 5- Moderate: 15%
- 10 Total Stress: 26%
- Not reported: 8%

On a scale of 1-4 how would you describe your relationship to “the life” in the commercial sex trade?
- Completely in: 10%
- More in than out: 23%
- More out than in: 49%
- Completely out: 35%
- Not reported: 8%
What are Your Hopes and Goals?

During the initial intake process, participants are invited to share their hopes and goals, but often cycles of addiction, exploitation, poverty and isolation can push people into a narrative that doesn’t allow for dreaming. At RIA House, we believe that stepping out of this narrative is possible, which is why we talk for hours and drive for miles to ensure every woman knows that she doesn’t have to step out alone.

“I really just want to be able to get a job and an apartment and get my life back together, and to get my daughter back.”

“I want to remain sober and also overcome the trauma I’ve endured, and help other females if possible along the way.”

“I want to get back to work, have a routine every day, and feel like I have a purpose in my life.”
In 2019 we delivered 2530 care encounters to 221 unduplicated women.

A care encounter can be as short as responding to a text message or as long as several hours supporting a woman after a sexual assault—helping her recuperate, seek medical attention, and report the crime. An encounter can include running support groups in local sober living houses, or helping participants access food pantries, identification cards, and new housing. It includes all the touchpoints that help build trust so that healing and growth can happen in people’s lives.
Trust is built slowly.

We are committed to walking with women no matter how long it takes. Impact happens over coffee, a meal together, a car ride to appointments, via phone, FaceTime, and text. The SheFund works to prevent re-exploitation by pushing against the system of poverty. In relationship with a RIA staff person, participants get the support they need to take their next steps.

For example, it is difficult to get a job without a phone and transportation, but many participants cannot pay for transportation and a phone without a job. Last year, the SheFund helped approximately 45 women access supports like phones and transportation to take their next steps towards new opportunities.
